

PROJECT LINUS The third grade class of Cindy Edgar at Lower Salford Elementary School, Harleysville, learned about the joy of giving by helping create a patchwork quilt that will be donated to a hospital or other service agency to comfort sick and needy children. "The students made the colorful patches that were sewn into a quilt by Michelle Johnson, a classroom parent.

Mrs. Johnson read to the class the book "The Quilt Makers Gift," and she thought it would be great lesson to take the book's theme of the "joy of giving" and make it a real life lesson. Connecting with the Project Linus, a national organization that provides new blankets for the needy, the class was able to donate their quilt to someone in need.

The project was capped off by a classroom visit by Mrs. Johnson and Barbara Epstein of Flourtown, the Montgomery/Bucks coordinator of Project Linus.

Mrs. Edgar's class joins Mrs. Johnson, left, and Ms. Epstein, right, as they display the finished product.